Name: _____ Date: _____

MALALA YOUSAFZAI

Read the biographical passage about Malala Yousafzai and answer the questions.

Malala Yousafzai, born on July 12, 1997, in Mingora, Pakistan, emerged as a global symbol of peaceful protest and the youngest Nobel Prize laureate in recognition of her struggle against the suppression of children's education. Growing up in a region where the Taliban had often banned girls from attending school, Malala's passion for education faced direct threats, yet her conviction only grew stronger.

From a young age, Malala advocated for girls' education, writing a blog under a pseudonym for the BBC and speaking out publicly despite the dangers. Her activism made her a target, and in 2012, a gunman boarded her school bus and shot her. The attack sparked an international outcry, bringing unprecedented attention to the issue of girls' education globally.

Miraculously surviving the assassination attempt, Malala refused to be silenced. Instead, she leveraged her experience to amplify her message across the world stage, co-founding the Malala Fund to support education advocacy projects in various countries and authoring a best-selling memoir, "I Am Malala," to share her story.

Malala's unwavering dedication to education equality has made her an influential voice in international politics and a symbol of resilience and determination for young activists everywhere. Her work underscores the power of the youth voice in advocating for global change and the importance of education for all, regardless of gender.

Use the Image

Name: _____ Date: _____

1 How did Malala Yousafzai begin her fight for education rights, and what risks did she face?

2 How did the attempt on Malala's life impact her advocacy work?

3 What does Malala's story teach us about the role of young people in social change movements?

Use the Village