Read the biography of Gabriel Garcia Marquez and answer the comprehension questions using the passage for reference.

Gabriel García Márquez (1927 - 2014) was born in a small town called Aracataca in Colombia. He grew up listening to stories told by his grandparents, which inspired him to become a writer. Gabriel loved to read and write from a young age and decided that he wanted to share his own stories with the world.

Gabriel became a famous author known for writing books that combined magical elements with real-life events. His most famous book is called One Hundred Years of Solitude. In this book, he tells the story of a family living in a fictional town called Macondo, where strange and magical things happen.

Gabriel's writing style is known as "magical realism," where he mixes the ordinary with the extraordinary. For example, in his stories, people might fly or live for hundreds of years, but everyone in the story treats these events as normal. This unique way of storytelling made Gabriel's books popular all around the world.

In 1982, Gabriel won the Nobel Prize in Literature, one of the highest honors a writer can receive. This award showed how important his work was to people all over the globe. Gabriel also wrote many other books, short stories, and essays during his lifetime, leaving a lasting impact on literature.

Gabriel García Márquez is remembered as one of the greatest writers of the 20th century. His stories continue to inspire readers of all ages, teaching them to look at the world in new and imaginative ways.
