OSCAR DE LA HOYA

Read the biography of Oscar De La Hoya and answer the comprehension questions using the passage for reference.

Oscar De La Hoya (born 1973) is a famous American boxer known as "The Golden Boy." He was born in East Los Angeles, California, to parents who had immigrated from Mexico. Oscar grew up in a close-knit family where boxing played an important role. His grandfather and father were both amateur boxers, and they inspired Oscar to start boxing when he was just 6 years old. Oscar was very dedicated, practicing every day and working hard to improve his skills.

When Oscar was 19 years old, he represented the United States in the 1992 Summer Olympics held in Barcelona, Spain. He won a gold medal in the lightweight division, which made him a hero in his community and across the country. People admired Oscar not only for his talent but also for his determination and hard work.

After the Olympics, Oscar became a professional boxer. He won 11 world titles in six different weight classes, which is very rare and made him one of the best boxers in the world. Oscar's success in boxing earned him the nickname "The Golden Boy," and he became a role model for many young people who looked up to him.

Oscar De La Hoya was not only successful in the ring but also made a big difference outside of it. He started his own company, Golden Boy Promotions, to help other boxers have successful careers. Oscar also gave back to his community by donating to schools, hospitals, and other important causes through his foundation, the Oscar De La Hoya Foundation.

Oscar's story teaches us the importance of dedication, hard work, and helping others. Even after retiring from boxing, Oscar De La Hoya continues to be a positive influence and a leader in the world of sports.
